Seek Continuation of S. W. Highway

Petitions have been signed the past week for the extension of the Southwest Highway from Orland to Sauemin and on to St. Louis. The petitions are addressed to Gov. Green and the state highway department.

According to the proponents of the road extension, the proposed road would parallel the Wabash railroad thru New Lenox, Manhattan on to sauemin and then join routes 47 and 48 to St. Louis. The proposed route would cut out the Wilmington Elwood munitions area. A mass meeting regarding this new road was held in Essex Thursday night.

Sunshine and Beauty Hold Sway At Tinley Woman's Club Meeting

Though the day was cloudy and dreary, sunshine and beauty held full sway at the March 26th meeting of the Tinley Park Woman's Club.

The Garden Department, under the capable direction of Mrs. Chas. Crist, chairman, had arranged a most interesting and unusual display for the pleasure of those present. There were dish gardens, terrariums, many beautiful house plants, a number of excellent forced branches and splendid arrangements, including unusual pussy-willows, not to forget the many What-nots etc., which greatly added to the beauty of the display. In short, the Garden Department deserves much credit for its sincere efforts.

We were indeed honored to have Mrs. Thomas Gifford, 3d Dist. president as our special guest. Mrs. Gifford retires from office this year and we were so happy to have been given the privilege of enjoying her personal message once more.

Mrs. E. J. Klinger, 3d Dist. Conservation chairman presented an inspiring talk on flower arrangements. Mrs. Klinger brought fresh flowers with her and showed exactly how to arrange them as she talked. We also enjoyed the company of the State Garden chairman, the third District chairman and members of the Tinley Park Garden Club. Joan Crist entertained with several piano selections. Tea was served after the new members had been presented to

An estranged husband in attempting to shoot his divorced wife almost caused the death of another man's wife.

The case in question occurred in New Lenox last Friday night about 10:30 o'clock when Eric Erickson of New Lenox, fired a shot at his estranged wife Ethel, missed her and shot Mrs. John Spuehler, aged 58, instead.

It is reported that for sometime Erickson has been following his ex-wife to various places where she has been employed, causing her to lose her jobs. Both Erickson and his ex-wife have been working in the Wilmington munitions project, Mrs. Erickson being employed in the canteen or restaurant.

The couple have two sons, one being 15 years, the other 7 years old. The older boy had been given an auto by his father who was allowed by court ruling to see his sons at certain stated times.

The Erickson home is south of New Lenox on Cedar Road. Last Friday night Mrs. Erickson and a friend Mrs. Ned Barnett were returning home from New Lenox, walking south on Cedar Road. An automobile passed them also going south and Mrs. Erickson noticed the driver was her ex-husband. The latter recognized her and stopping the car called to her to come to the car which she refused to do but instead she and her friend turned about and headed back for New Lenox. In the meantime Erickson turned his car northward and followed the women who seeing light in the John Spuehler home on Haven ave., right off Cedar Road, ran on the porch and called to the members of the Spuehler family to let them in to use their phone, but they were told to go next door to a store. By this time Erickson was on the scene. Erickson pulled a gun and fired at his estranged wife. The bullet missed the women, but went thru a door frame and struck Mrs. Spuehler in her left hip, carrying a clasp on a corset which Mrs. Spuehler was wearing into the wound. Bullet and clasp entered the hip bone and deflected downward into the leg, causing a ragged and dangerous wound.

Attracted by the screams of the women, the male members of the Spuehler family summoned Dr. L. S. Pederson of Manhattan and Mrs. Spuehler was rushed to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet where she was in a serious condition for a few days, but at the latest reports she is out of danger and is improving nicely.

In the excitement Erickson disappeared. Deputies from the Will Co. sheriff's office searched for him thruout the night, but found no trace of him and he has not showed up at his place of employment. It is said Erickson goes under six different aliases. The search for him is still going on and it is hoped he may be captured thru his fingerprints which were taken when he entered the muntion job.

Men in U. S. Army Best Fed in Nation With Meals Carefully Planned by Experts

By HOPE CHAMBERLIN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

FT. SLOCUM, N. Y.—America's rapidly growing army will be on display April 7 as Army Day is observed throughout the nation. Whether visiting civilians know it or not, they will be watching the best fed army in the world. They will see men whose diet is watched so carefully that even the number of calories and vitamins they eat are planned far in advance.

"Uncle Sam feeds its soldiers better 'n 72 per cent of American families are fed." . . . these are the words of Sergt. Thomas L. Delvecchio, boss of the U. S. Army School for Bakers and Cooks at Ft. Slocum, N. Y. And he should know!

Proof of Sergeant Delvecchio's statement comes from Maj. Paul Logan, food expert of the army's quartermaster corps, who states emphatically that the army is and will continue to be the best fed group of our population!

In averaging the analyses made of army messes throughout the country, it was found that the American soldier consumes 5,138 calories a day, as compared to the 3,000 of the average American. In vitamins, the soldier averages 5,760 units of vitamin A, 1,173 of vitamin B, 46 milligrams of vitamin C, and 2.3 milligrams of vitamin B2—all in greater quantities than the average American!

Served Nutritious Food.

"Come and get it" to the soldier of 1941 means a plateful of good, palatable, nutritious food. To food wholesalers and government men it means hard work behind the scenes.

Before conscription, when the army had no more than 50,000 men, split into given units, the food-buying problem was simple. The 130-odd camp quartermasters went personally to local markets.

But the problem changed overnight. Not only will the army shortly have a million and a half men to feed, but the number of men in each camp will be tremendous.

Camps of 25,000 men require more food than cities of equal size. The army will be about the biggest food buyer and distributor in the country, exceeded in size only by A & P and perhaps one or two other chains.

On certain staple items, such as canned goods, army purchases may well amount to from 10 to 15 per cent of total production. Food orders that used to require less-than-carload shipments will call for the shipment of many solid carloads. So, independent local buying is out of the question, and centralized purchasing is the only logical answer.

Regional Markets.

New York offices will buy all sugar, coffee, tea, spices and other manufactured items. Chicago will buy all canned vegetables, canned meats, cereal, flour and similar foodstuffs produced on a nationwide basis. San Francisco will buy canned and dried fruits, salmon and other West coast produce.

By May 1, the date when the army will start issuing rations to local quartermasters in actual food, rather than cash, these new super offices will be ready to take over all contract letting, according to Douglas MacKeachie, food purchase co-ordinator.

When it comes to buying food, the army is far more finicky than the average housewife. Old army rules read that a packer could deliver on an army contract no lamb weighing more than 45 pounds, and the soldiers' mess tables used to be guarded against all but steer beef. But that's all changed now.

Because the army can't be guided by what the book says, but by what

K. P. (kitchen patrol) ain't what it used to be. These giant spud peelers can each peel a bushel of potatoes a minute.

Government Buys Auto Trailers for Defense Workers

WASHINGTON.—More than 2,000 automobile trailers are being purchased by the government to furnish "stopgap" housing in crowded defense areas.

These orders are expected to absorb virtually the entire output of the largest manufacturers in the trailer business for some time, according to C. B. Baldwin, Farm Security administrator.

The trailer camps will be established as part of the emergency de-

Even though meals are now scientifically planned by experts, army cooks look the same as they did back in '17. This field kitchen staff is hard at work preparing for "mess" because the soldiers will probably be very hungry.

the market offers, lambs up to 60 pounds will be acceptable until April 30, when the new group is well along. Heifer meat will be acceptable for boned, frozen field supplies.

Smaller Cans Used.

The army has also stepped down its ideas on can sizes and will hereafter buy some of its spiced pork products (such as Spam and Prem) in the 12-ounce cans of retail trade, instead of holding doggedly to only those cans large enough to feed a battalion. Also, six-ounce cans of emergency rations will be bought in large quantities.

Soldiers generally get meat for five dinners, five suppers and four breakfasts a week. Allowances for the noon meal alone average around one-half pound per man—more meat than the civilian ordinarily engulfs, no matter how prosperous.

The foregoing facts are probably adequate to convince the reader that military experts recognize the importance of good food in maintaining a high esprit de corps, morale and efficiency of an army. Without good food and nutrition, all other preparation, no matter how carefully planned, will not be brilliantly or efficiently executed.

The collapse of Germany in 1918 was partially due to malnutrition of the German soldier; the rout of the Italians in Caporetto in October, 1917, has been traced to the drastic reduction in the Italian army ration put into effect the preceding February; similarly, the defeat of the British at Gallipoli in the Dardanelles campaign of 1915-1916 has been attributed to the failure of mind, nerve and muscle, caused by rations so unbalanced as to permit a high percentage of both beri beri and scurvy.

Aware of the importance of food, the quartermaster corps, directly responsible for providing food, and plenty of it, has efficient personnel, highly trained in the science of nutrition, inspection, and preparation of food.

Maintain Cooking School.

Because there has been difficulty in the past in obtaining enough good cooks, the army even maintains cooking schools (one of which is located in every army corps area) whose facilities may be severely tested by the rapid growth of our citizen army. The best cooks, it is said, are Negroes, Frenchmen and Italians.

The ration (food provided for one man for one day) being used by our citizen army for its one-year of training is called the Garrison ration. It consists of 39 items, such as 10 ounces of beef and 8 ounces of other meats; 10 ounces of potatoes and 11 ounces of other fresh vegetables; 12 ounces of flour; 1½ ounces of rolled oats and a little more than 10 ounces of rice and dried beans; 20 ounces of butter; 1 egg; 1½ ounces of lard; 8 ounces of fresh milk and 10 of evaporated; 5 ounces of sugar; 5 ounces of fruit, 20 of coffee and smaller amounts of various others, such as jams, jellies, peanut butter and condiments. The shipping weight of this food is 5½ pounds every day for each man. The cost? $750,000 a day for a million and a half soldiers.

This Garrison ration, however, is not limited to these 39 items, which might become monotonous. This is prevented by a system of substitution, which permits the mess officer to substitute other items in the same general class of foods of about equal nutritive value. That is, in place of the 10 ounces of beef each day, he may substitute an equal amount of lamb, mutton, veal, liver, or pork.

Latest news for army diets is the plan for feeding soldiers bread fortified by the morale-building B vitamins, which, authorities claim, will make them better fighters.

Strain on body and nerves which modern warfare brings about with its lightning speed, whirlwind devastation and nerve-shattering machines causes army nutritionists to feel that soldiers must be fed not only enough food of the right kind, but enriched foods.

Dehydrated foods are also undergoing tests. These foods occupy little space, and therefore help the quartermaster corps in its continual battle to ship as much food in as little space as possible. Soldiers recently ate a test dinner prepared entirely from dehydrated foods, except for the meat and gravy. The menu included cream of tomato soup, roast beef with brown gravy, mashed potatoes, creamed carrots, cole slaw, cranberry jelly, apple and pumpkin pie.

A pound of cranberry flakes, "gross weight," expands to serve 109 soldiers, whereas a pound of canned cranberry jelly represents only 6½ servings.

Food value of the dehydrated preparations is apparently equal to that of canned foods, but tests are now being conducted to obtain accurate information as to the vitamin and mineral values that the dried foods contain.

All this planning is a far cry from the meager unbalanced meals fed the Colonial Army. And it proves that those in command are leaving no stone unturned in their effort to serve, in American Army camps everywhere, the finest mess on earth!

Tuberculosis Death Rate Found Highest Among Young Girls

MINNEAPOLIS.—Girls between 15 and 25 years of age have lagged far behind young men of the same ages, in the improvement of the tuberculosis death rate.

Each year 65 per cent more girls die from the disease than their brothers, boy friends and husbands in the 15-25 age bracket, according to a study by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

In the United States tuberculosis does its deadliest work nowadays among women of child-bearing ages, the population segment most vital to America's present and future, the study points out.

Biological differences—the greater changes in the female organism at adolescence—make girls and young women naturally more susceptible to tuberculosis.

The male death rate from tuberculosis overtakes that of women at about age 30, and thereafter runs steadily higher, but in the child-bearing ages from 20 to 35, 22 per cent more women die of tuberculosis than do men of corresponding ages. The greatest number of deaths from this cause among any five-year age-sex group occurs among young women aged 20-24, and the second largest group of fatalities occurs among young women aged 25 to 29.

Since girls first reach maximum susceptibility to tuberculosis in their early teens, the report suggests that all high schools should conduct health classes in which effects of "fad" diets, tobacco, alcohol, insufficient sleep, and scanty clothing are graphically taught.

It also recommends that parents of teen-age and older girls should alert promptly upon observing any symptoms of lassitude, even slight elevation of temperature, or loss of appetite.

A tuberculin test should be made, supplemented by X-ray chest examinations wherever indicated. If there has been any exposure through association with a case of tuberculosis in class or elsewhere, tests should always be made.

A case of pleurisy without pneumonia, the report warns, should in the case of a girl or young woman be considered tuberculosis until definitely proved otherwise. If tuberculosis is detected in its early stages and modern treatment is promptly begun and carried through, a cure is usually assured.

Congress to assert absolute control over powers of taxation . . . President Roosevelt has not changed his position on Hitler.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Congress is going to make what will at least seem to be a convincing demonstration very shortly now that it has not abrogated ALL its powers. That will be when it takes up the tax bill.

President Roosevelt has given no indication so far of any desire to impose his wishes on congress on this question, though it is too much to expect that he will not have ideas before the bill reaches final passage. There is a disposition, however, for congress to act very independently on this issue.

Congress has always been very jealous of its tax powers. The bill, under the Constitution, must originate in the house.

Congress has quarreled vigorously with nearly every President on tax questions. Even President Roosevelt has not always found it easy to impose his will in this particular field. The only big tax fight he made, and won, he subsequently lost. This was when he forced through the tax on undistributed corporation earnings, which congress later modified, and finally virtually eliminated. It was aimed more at social reform than at money-raising.

MONEY NEEDED

But this time the main purpose will really be to let no guilty nickel escape. The government needs the money. It needs more than it can possibly raise, and hence will have to do a lot of borrowing.

So members of the house and senate will look askance at any tax proposal which has for its real objective social or economic reform rather than money-raising.

There is another phase to this business of needing a lot of revenue. When the bill is finally enacted it will probably never merit the name of a "soak the rich" bill. The answer to that is very simple. This bill will have to raise so much money that it is going to have to hit everybody who has any money. The taxes on the rich will be boosted, of course, but the real burden is going to fall on the little fellows.

Roosevelt's Speeches Reveal Foreign Policy

Every utterance of President Roosevelt on the war situation goes just a little bit further than the one immediately preceding. There was a good deal of comment on his address to the dinner of the White House correspondents, which instead of being off the record, as have most of his talks before the National Press club, the Gridiron club, etc., was not only "on the record" but was broadcast. This speech went a little further than he had ever gone before in revealing the lengths to which he was willing to go to defeat Hitler.

A good deal of the comment seems to take it for granted that the President has been gradually changing his position. This is not true. The President has not changed his position with regard to Hitler's idea of world domination one iota since September, 1939. His position has always been that Germany must be beaten; that whatever is necessary to defeat Hitler is absolutely necessary for the ultimate safety of the United States.

He has changed his views frequently as to what would be NECESSARY to accomplish this. He may have to change them repeatedly in the future.

The simplest way to state Mr. Roosevelt's position is that whatever is necessary to defeat Hitler must be done and will be done as quickly as he can get the American people convinced of that necessity.

POSITION UNCHANGED

The fact is that Mr. Roosevelt's present position is actually older than the present war. It was revealed as long ago as 1937, when he made his famous "quarantine the aggressors" speech. He has always toyed with the notion of steps "short of war." He continues to hope that actual participation, to the extent of American guns shooting, will not be necessary.

The President learned a lesson from that "quarantine the aggressors" speech. He ran into a storm of criticism. He was sharply admonished by no less an advisor at the time than Secretary of State Cordell Hull, whose logic, that the public must be led very slowly and by very short steps, impressed Roosevelt as sound.

Every new speech or utterance of the President for a long time past and for some time to come will mark one of those short steps. Naturally the news writers try to make each new speech a sensation. That lends itself to headlines. Careful perusal of each speech, however, and a rereading then of the immediately preceding speech, will show that the step is a short one. But it is always in the same direction.

Middle-Aged Should Adopt Safe Routine

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHENEVER you hear about how much longer men and women live today than just 25 years ago, you know that the main reason is that there are not so many children die at birth or during their first year now. Also that infectious diseases of children can be prevented.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

What many of us fail to remember is that the middle-aged man of today has a longer expectation of life than ever before despite the fact that he may not be very robust.

Why has the middle-aged individual a longer life expectancy despite the fact that he is not more robust than were those of middle age, 25 years ago?

The reason is that men and women with heart disease, diabetes, pernicious anemia, high blood pressure or other "dangerous" conditions have been told by their physicians and many have learned for themselves how to live "safely."

Recently I met a middle-aged friend walking much slower than was his custom. On questioning, he admitted that his physician had advised him that if he wanted to live for a number of years, he could do so by walking more slowly and resting more.

We have friends and acquaintances who follow a low starch diet or take insulin injections daily and live a normal life. Formerly these cases died in a short time with diabetes. They have learned also not to put on excess fat.

Eat Liver Daily.

Similarly with that formerly fatal disease pernicious anemia. Many a bright and useful man and woman formerly passed away in a few months or a year following some shock or infection. Today these men and women eat about a quarter pound of liver daily or take liver extract and continue to live.

Less than 20 years ago, operation for ulcer of the stomach or small intestine (peptic ulcer) was common. Today the majority of ulcer patients have learned how to live safely and free from ulcer symptoms by following a diet, avoiding emotional disturbances and removing or preventing infection of teeth, tonsils, gall bladder and intestine.

Food Allergy And Its Effects

THERE are many symptoms that may be caused by foods to which one is allergic and these symptoms may occur anywhere in or on the body. Thus, in addition to hives, the skin may be afflicted with eczema due to foods, and itching and swelling of the skin is very common.

Similarly, the whole digestive tract from the mouth to the lower end may be affected by foods to which the individual is sensitive—little canker sores in the mouth and on the lips, nausea, vomiting, gas pressure, diarrhoea, constipation or colitis.

Everybody seems to be allergic to at least one food that causes head colds—sniffing and running nose, sneezing, itchingness, and a hacking cough. A great many cases of asthma have been traced to a food, all symptoms disappearing when the offending food was omitted.

Some cases of irritable bladder causing frequent and sometimes painful passage of the urine are not due to colds or to drugs but to sensitivity to food.

That the "nerves" can be affected by sensitiveness to foods has been established, such symptoms as migraine (one-sided headache), dizziness, neuralgia and irritability disappearing when certain foods were omitted from the diet.

Foods that do not usually cause allergic symptoms are lamb, gelatin, butter, sugar, tapioca, barley, arrowroot, soya and string beans, cooked apples, asparagus, cooked peas, pineapples, cooked pears, white and sweet potatoes.

The foods that do often cause symptoms are onions, cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, milk, cream, chocolate, radishes, eggs, fats, greasy and rich foods, pork, pickles, cheese, salmon, fruits, peppers, oranges, sweets, spices.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is it possible for one to bring about a cure of stomach ulcer through diet and operation?

A.—Formerly operation was often the treatment for gastric or stomach ulcer. Now treatment is mostly by diet and rest. Your physician or nearest hospital can give you a copy of an ulcer diet. Keep reporting to your physician and you can thus prevent any other growth getting a start in your stomach. I might add, ulcer is brought by a calm out-

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 4 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon were joint owners of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When building up this string of ranches, they continually had to fight the unscrupulous Ben Thorpe. Thorpe rivaled King-Gordon in power.

Bill glanced at Jody, and her startled face was very lovely, high-lighted by the little fire. He laced his hand together to stop their shaking. "Tonight I told you father what I'm going to do. My idea is to give Thorpe his own medicine, and force it down him until he's finished; a wild bunch of our own, tougher than his, made up of men that hate him to the ground."

"And then—?"

"Raid and counter-raid, and what he's taken, take back! Until his credit busts, and his varmints drop from around him, and he's just one man, so that another man can walk against him with a six-gun, and know that when that's done he's finished for sure . . ."

"Bill, are you crazy? You can't—you can't—"

His voice was bleak; it could hardly be heard. He was looking at his hands. "We've talked too many years of what couldn't be done, or how. Until now, Dusty's out there tonight, under that stone pile—and still nothing to be done. I reckon it's my turn to ride, now."

"But—all his outfits—his sheriffs, his men—"

"They'll quit, as he breaks. I'm going after Cleve Tanner first, in the Big Bend; and when I'm through with him, Thorpe won't be able to throw a feeder herd on the trail. Then Walk Lasham, in the north, where they're already hurt for lack of the Crying Wolf—until—"

His words were monotoned, but Jody Gordon, bred and born to the gaunt Texan plains, knew what a wild bunch was, and what it meant to go against Ben Thorpe by his own means.

Jody said, "And—what about us?"

"Jody, I was hoping—I was hoping you'd swing with me."

"What way is there for me to swing with you?"

"This may take a long time; but it won't take forever. Some day all these war clouds will be cleared away. And—if you could see it my way, maybe you'd let me come back to you then."

There seemed to be no breath in Jody's voice. "I'm supposed to wait around, and think well of you, while you gang with the wild bunch in a crazy, useless feud that you can't win?"

In the uncertain light of the fire Bill Roper's eyes could not be seen; his face was a mask painted by the embers. He found nothing that he could say.

Suddenly Jody flared up. Her eyes blazed, and her hair streamed back from her face as she sat up, as if she rode in the wind.

"You can't, you can't! I won't let you—it isn't fair, nor right, nor decent—"

"It's what I have to do."

Jody stopped as if she had been struck. When she spoke again her voice was low and even, and so stony hard that he would not have recognized it.

"I don't believe you. I think tomorrow you'll be telling me that all this isn't so. But if you do mean it—if you go on and do as you say—then you and I are through, and I don't want to see you again, or hear your voice. We—we had everything; and you're throwing it all away . . ."

The firelight caught the glint of her tears, and she turned away, head up, with a toss of her hair so that its brown mist hid her face from him.

Bill didn't say anything. He had turned gray-faced, and he stared into the coals. Presently, as he watched the fire, he saw again a rift of brush, in which a little boy hid like a rabbit; and a gently grinning face, that was through with grinning now. He thought of Dry Camp's story; "Seemed like he'd never fall . . ."

Roper got up silently, and went out of the house.

Lew Gordon was playing solitaire when Bill Roper got back to the little shack by the loading pens. Roper took off his hat, tossed it aside, and sat down.

"We can just as well figure up the terms of the split."

"What did Jody say?"

"She's quitting me, Lew."

"What the devil else can you expect her to do, if you go on with this wild, stubborn—"

"I couldn't expect anything else."

Lew Gordon looked baffled; obviously he had counted on Jody to turn back Bill Roper.

"You ready to draw up the terms?"

"Hardly seems it can be done in a minute. It'll take a few days to—"

"I'm leaving in the morning. My terms are few and simple. You can work out the details any way that suits yourself."

"Let's hear your idea of it."

"I don't figure to take much with me," Roper said. "But there are some things I need. First thing, I want seven of our camps in Texas."

Lew Gordon stared at the table, picked up a pencil, fidgeted with it. "Which ones?"

"I want the Pot Hook camp; and the winter camp of the Three Bar, er and wealth, but he had gained his position through wholesale cattle rustling and gunplay. King outbid Thorpe in an auction of valuable grasslands; the same afternoon he was killed. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, found out that he had been shot down and the southwest outpost of the old Bar-Circle. I want two of the border camps; Willow Creek will do for one, and the Dry Saddle Crossing will do for the other. I want the new Bull Wagon camp, and the K-G horse ranch at Stillwater."

"The brands are going to be terrible mixed up," Gordon said.

"I'm only taking such cattle as are running under odd brands; all our regular brands stay with you. I've placed my camps so that your stock can be worked as before. Except maybe the Pot Hook, and we'll come to some special deal—"

Gordon threw his pencil down. "You're not getting anything out of this that anybody can use," he declared.

"I think I'll know how to use it. Later on I'll send you a list of the northern camps I want; they'll amount to about the same as the ones I want in Texas."

"It sure sounds to me like you're wanting me to buy you out in cash," Gordon said. "And if that's what's in your mind—I can't do it, Bill. There just ain't the money."

"The brands are going to be terrible mixed up," Gordon said.

"There won't be any trouble about that. In Texas I may need up to fifty thousand dollars; but I don't have to have it all at once. It'll work out easy enough, Lew."

Even the rough provisional terms that they were noting here provided innumerable complications. In the next few hours, as they worked it out, many a consideration came up that Bill Roper hadn't thought of. It was near morning before Roper left to seek out Dry Camp Pierce to complete his plans.

CHAPTER VI

Bill Roper headed south shortly after sunrise. Today Dry Camp would be going east by railroad, beginning the long roundabout way which would bring him to Texas long before Bill. With his camps as a secure base, Pierce was to begin the missionary work which would lay the foundations for Bill Roper's wild bunch.

Lew Gordon had shaken hands with him gravely at his departure; an uncomfortable job for Bill, which he was glad to get over with. But Jody Gordon—he had not seen her again at all. He was thinking of her now as she had flared up at him the night before, warlike as a little eagle, but very lovely still, with the fire in her eyes.

Watchful always, he knew when, two miles off, a horseman dropped from a lookout just at the crest of a rise; and he knew that the rider had seen him and was moving to intercept his trail.

He did not have so long to wait as he had thought. No more than ten minutes had passed when the unknown rider came dusting around the shoulder of a sand hill and headed toward him at the dead run. Roper turned his horse broadside to the approach and waited.

The rider was Jody Gordon.

She appeared to have taken to the saddle in a hurry, for she wasn't wearing chaps, or anything else she should have been riding in. What distance she had come she had come fast, for her pony's flanks were heaving.

"You sure punish that horse," he said.

"I've got no call to save him. I'm not going any place."

There was a little silence, awkward for Bill Roper, as she sat and looked at him. The lower lids of her eyes were violet, so that he knew she had not slept; but he could not read her faintly smoky eyes.

by Thorpe and two aides. Against the strong opposition of his partner, Lew Gordon, Bill decided to start a cattle war in Texas against Thorpe. Before leaving Bill went to tell his sweetheart, pretty Jody Gordon, about his plans.

She was more pale than he had ever seen her, and the passivity of her face made her look like a little girl again.

"Sure sorry," he said, "that I didn't get to say good-by to you. Didn't seem like you were any place around."

For a second or two the familiar twinkle seemed about to come into her eyes. "Did you hunt real hard?"

"Well—maybe I didn't. I guess it kind of seemed like we'd already said everything there was to be said."

"Maybe," she said slowly, "I didn't say everything I ought to have said. I want you to know this: 'When you ride out of my life there isn't going to be anything left in it.'"

"Jody," he said, "are you trying to turn me back now?"

Her only answer was a little hopeless motion of her hands.

"Your father and I put in four hours last night, roughing out the terms of my split from King-Gordon. Think back yourself—did you ever see me turned back from something I figured I ought to do?"

She shook her head, and her face had even less color than before.

"What did you say to my father?"

"What did he tell you I said?"

"That I—quit you?"

"Well—didn't you?"

"Don't you know," she said crazily, "I wouldn't ever do that?"

He was silent, his eyes on his buckskin gloves as he adjusted his rope, the buckle of his rifle boot.

"I don't care anything about King-Gordon," Jody said. "I don't care whether you stay in King-Gordon, or get out, or where you go, or what you do. I'd go with you if you wanted me to go; and if you don't know that you don't know anything at all!"

"Jody—you mean that?"

"In King-Gordon you were on the way to big things. But I don't care anything about that. Let the break-up with my father go through. Quit King-Gordon without two bits to your name. Take the least out-post camp there is under the brand, and let him have the rest. I'll go with you, and stay with you; and I'll help you in every way I can to build something of our own."

He wanted to say something, anything; but he found he could not speak at all.

Jody said, almost hysterically, "Aren't you ever going to say anything?"

Bill Roper mumbled to his saddle horn, "Didn't know you felt that way . . . Wouldn't ever be any call—any reason—for you to let go all hots like that."

She was leaning toward him now, her voice gentle, coaxing, very tender. "Our own little old outfit—any outfit, any place—don't you see what a happy place we could make that be? A place where we could plant trees near the water, and watch them grow into big trees; and we'd be there together—"

Roper shot a quick glance at Jody, and immediately sent his eyes away again, as far as they could reach. If he had looked at her again, perhaps he would have kicked his pony stirrup to stirrup with hers and picked her out of the saddle, and kissed her mouth, and kept her close to him—then, and forever. But he sat motionless on his waiting pony.

"Look," he said at last— "Look—if you mean that, come with me. Come with me, now."

He could hardly hear her as she said, "Don't you think you ought to tell me where you're going?"

"Dry Camp Pierce is on his way, by a quicker way than mine is. If he don't fall down there'll be the start of a wild bunch waiting for me when I land in the Big Bend Country. I figure to take that bunch, and build to it, and add on. After that—well, you know what comes after that."

"And now, you're asking me to swing with that?"

"Jody, I've already told you what I've got to do."

The silence stretched out until you could have hung a saddle on it, and this time Bill's eyes were on Jody, and hers were on the saddle horn.

Slowly she shook her head.

After a minute he said, "I guess that settles it, doesn't it?"

"I guess it does."

Her face seemed blind, and she was like a ghost of Jody Gordon. Suddenly Bill Roper knew that if he did not take the trail he had chosen now, he would never take it at all.

"You sure, Jody? You won't come?"

Again she shook her head.

A long, loose end of Bill's rope was in his hand, though he never remembered taking it down. Hardly knowing what he did, he struck the spurs into the buckskin pony. The snap of the rope's end knocked a flying gout of fur from the rump of the black pack mule, and they were on the trail—the long trail, the dry trail, the trail of a hopeless war.

Village Jail Asks

Breakless Fixtures

LEROY, N. Y.—The Leroy village board wants shatter-proof fixtures installed in the jail.

Lady in Blue Has Most Sex Appeal

Red an Also Ran in Tests With Psychometer.

NEW YORK.—Girls, if you're trying to get a man—or want to keep the one you have—sprinkle your wardrobe generously with navy blue.

It was discovered that that's the color that gets 'em—not red, as you've been taught.

Eight men were hooked up to a gadget called a psychometer. Then they gazed upon gorgeous models in colored dresses. It was the lady in blue who made their hands the clanniest, their hearts the jumpiest.

The next most agitating colors were coral, beige and green. What happened to red? Nobody knew.

The males who submitted to the psychometer included two actors, Lyle Talbot and Ole Olsen; two theater ushers, a pair of brokers and a couple of blushing football players.

The ushers were the hit of the experiment. One of them had the lowest reaction, eight points, and the other was high with 32.

When the latter's score was announced, a number of the 150 girl students at the Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Research, where the test was held, shrieked: "What's his telephone number?"

Perspiration in the palms was the chief factor in the test recordings. Each subject closed his eyes, relaxed. Then, with electrodes strapped to his palms, he opened his eyes and looked at one color at a time. The machine registered in proportion to the amount of perspiration the color caused.

All of the men declared it was the color and not the model that affected them.

Lives of Mother and Baby

Born in Road Saved by Dog

DURANT, OKLA.—A collie dog saved the life of a 35-year-old woman and the baby to which she gave birth, unattended, in a cold rain on a country road.

Capt. Leon J. Thomas, of the Salvation Army, said that Mrs. Ed C. Northrup inexplicably left her husband and small daughter in their home near Hugo, Okla., recently. She wandered down a narrow country road in a cold, beating rain.

On the way, she gave birth to a son. She had lain by the road, in the rain, all night, when the collie led Lonzo Caldwell, a farmer, to her.

Residents reported that the dog—they did not know to whom it belonged—barked at several houses during the night, and whined and scratched at their doors. They chased him away. Finally he attracted Mr. Caldwell's attention and led him to the mother and her baby.

Physicians said the child weighed nine pounds and was healthy. Mrs. Northrup suffered shock, but was recovering in a hospital here.

Army Selectee's Error in

Age Costs Him $9,748

DALLAS.—Buck Private Louis A. Neveleff, a former $10,000-a-year executive, wishes he had looked up his age before registering for the draft.

Private Neveleff was a buyer for a Dallas department store until a month ago. Then the army packed him off to Camp Bowie and gave him a rifle.

Then Private Neveleff discovered that he was born April 10, 1904, instead of 1905. The year will cost Neveleff $9,748, the difference between $10,000 a year and $21 a month.

Abandoned Ship Sails

Herself Home to Britain

LONDON.—A 200-ton "ghost ship" sailed herself 60 miles to land recently after being abandoned by its crew when fire broke out from unknown origin. The navigatorless vessel missed a dangerous rock by inches and berthed itself in a west coast inlet.

The engines were left turning over slowly as the crew fled to lifeboats so hurriedly that their wallets were left behind. The flames burned out quickly and the ship soon will be able to return to service.

Well-Dressed Japanese

Are Wearing Horsehair

TOKYO.—Necessity being the mother of invention, Japan has a new cloth this season. It is made of horse hair and is said to rival woolen goods for clothing. The new invention is the brain child of Professor Massatoshi Sasakawa of the Kagoshima Forestry college. It calls for the mixing of old woolen materials with horsehair and silk.

CHRIST PROMISES POWER

LESSON TEXT—Acts 1:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

Important things bear repetition. Luke, who wrote both the Gospel and the Acts, presents the ascension of Christ, His promise of power, and His command to witness, at the conclusion of the Gospel and at the beginning of the Acts. "The one is all suffused with evening light; the other is radiant with the promise of a new day. The one is the record of a tender farewell; in the other, the sense of parting has almost been absorbed in the forward look to the new phase of relationship which is to begin."—(Alexander McLaren).

I. The Proof of Christ's Resurrection (vv. 1-3).

Before telling of "the day in which he was taken up," Luke makes it clear that the ascended Christ, who had made the promise of power to His disciples, was the very one who died for our sins, but who could not be held of death or the grave. He arose, of which there are indeed "many infallible proofs" (v. 3). At Easter time we recall the fact that leading historians and experts in the field of evidence have declared that the resurrection is the best established fact in all history.

The fact that for forty days after His resurrection Christ was among His disciples, speaking to them of the things of the kingdom of God, is significant and conclusive proof in itself.

As the indispensable dynamic of their service as His witnesses, He now assures them that they will receive power.

II. The Promise of Christ's Power (vv. 4-8).

They were to tarry in Jerusalem until the power of the Holy Ghost came upon them. This took place on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2) when the Holy Spirit came to abide. We no longer are called on to tarry for the Holy Spirit to fall on us, for the moment we believe. He comes into our lives in blessed abiding presence. But we do need to tarry, to wait for His fullness of power, before we attempt to minister for Christ. We need to yield to Him for His fullness, bringing out emptiness that He may fill us and then use us.

The disciples had an important question to ask (v. 6) regarding the restoration of the kingdom. The reply of Jesus turned their attention from that future matter to their present obligation to witness for Him and their need of power for that witness. This does not mean that His followers are to lack interest in the Kingdom which Christ will one day establish, nor that they should fail to be interested in prophecy and its fulfillment. It does clearly mean that we must leave times, seasons and dates to the Lord and be diligently about the business of witnessing for Him.

How greatly the little band of disciples needed power in that day to face a hostile, unbelieving world, sunken in bondage to Satan, and bring to it the convicting and converting message of the gospel. They received that power, and in spite of every hindrance the gospel through the centuries has made its way to the hearts of men, and won its victories for God.

We need that power today. The Holy Spirit is here to give it to us, as we yield our lives to God. There are many Spirit-empowered men and women in the Church today, but relatively their number is small. Who is ready to yield to His control now, and thus swell the host of faithful and effective witnesses?

III. The Pledge of Christ's Return (vv. 9-12).

We mentioned last week that sermons are seldom preached on the ascension of Christ, although it has an important place in the Bible. Even more glaring and disturbing is the failure of preachers and teachers to declare the truth of the second coming of Christ. The promise of it is written large on the pages of the Bible, but some men seem to ignore it.

How plain and understandable is the promise in this passage. "This Jesus"—not some other—"shall so come"; that is, personally, literally, and visibly. There is no ground here for spiritualizing, to say, for example that He comes in death, or that this was but a metaphorical expression.

The text is very plain and emphatic. In agreement, we find, among others, such texts as Luke 21: 7; John 14:3; Philippians 3:20, 21; I Thessalonians 1:7-10; I Thessalonians 4:16; II Timothy 4:8; Hebrews 9:28; Revelation 1:7. Unless we reject God's Word, we must receive this truth, and should receive it with joy, for it is the blessed hope of the Church (Titus 2:13). He is coming again!

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Always polish furniture with the grain in the wood.

Grease can be removed from an iron by rubbing cornmeal over it.

Sauces shouldn't be added to boiled onions, cabbage or celery until time to serve.

Soap and water will remove ink stains from washable fabrics if stains are first soaked in milk.

Mirrors should never be cleaned with soap suds. The best results are obtained by rubbing them with a paste of whiting and water. Then polish with a dry chamois to remove the powder.

To beat egg whites quickly add a pinch of cream of tartar before starting to beat. The eggs will froth more quickly and hold their shape a longer time.

GOOD REASONS WHY QUINTUPLETS use MUSTEROLE for CHEST COLDS

Mother—Give YOUR Child This Same Expert Care!

At the first sign of a chest cold the Quintuplets' throats and chests are rubbed with Children's Mild Musterole—a product made to promptly relieve the DISTRESS of children's colds and resulting bronchial and croupy coughs.

Relief usually comes quickly because Musterole is MORE than an ordinary "salve." It helps break up local congestion. As Musterole is used on the Quints you may be sure you are using just about the BEST product made. Also in Regular and Extra Strength for those preferring a stronger product.

Is grandma at your house?

She's getting on toward 80, perhaps and she doesn't get enough exercise; sits around, knits and dozes. Of course you want to keep her as long as you can. If her inactivity brings on bowel-laziness, intestinal and stomach gas, followed by listlessness, sour stomach and bad breath, probably restless nights, get her some ADLERIK. She will find it gentle in action, yet thoro. Druggists have sold it for 40 years. Get ADLERIK today.

RYTHM ROLLERS

Now that you've hunted thru the Tinley Times and have found our column you can read right into the dedication... Orchids, roses and lilies to any one, if there is anyone, who didn't fall Saturday night. Congratulations!

With great pleasure we present the hero of the week. ZEKE! Shall we officially honor this hero by naming a week after him? "Zeke Week" instead of Clean-up Week. "Zeke the Great" rides again on wheels, or should we say the seat of his pants, while June nobly messed up his performance with a back-bend over him.

The enormous crowd of nine people was a train on Wally so he took a power dive and wiped up the dust on the floor—result landing apparatus completely demolished.

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Court is now in session. Next case Rose and Jimmy charged with a white (?) lie involving a ring—you know, the left hand third finger type. But since they pleaded guilty, we will give them a suspended sentence but if it happens again we'll suspend them in the air.

We not only had a glimpse of Lester, but also the color of his clothes when he slowed down Saturday. You won't believe it, but you were going only 95—watch it Les. Your reputation will be smashed.

Orphans, that's what we are. "Ma" is confined to her bou-doir, and "Pa" is holding her hand. As for us, Phoo! they don't know we exist.

Dot Snyder is making sure she won't die an old maid. Not from lack of choice anyway, she's got another flame to feed her fire of love.

Hey! Watch it! Catch her somebody, she's going down. And down she went. Mella we salute you. Got circus blood in them tar veins?

Hey! What's the matter with me? I've got spots before my eyes. Oh, it's only Spotto (anyway that's our version) the new game. Ah, get back to your own number, wise guy. Smartie, trying to slide across to the winning number, take a tip from me, it won't work.

What's the matter? Is everyone on a budget? Saturday night "The Crowd Roars" and Sunday night "In My Solitude". Motto: You can't be a good skate if you're a cheap skate. Well everyone had a good time even if YOU weren't there.

The Village Board meets April 14. This will be the last meeting of the present board.

New Women's Christian Service Organization in The Orland Methodist Church

An all day meeting of the Ladies Guild of the Methodist church was held in the church parlors last Thursday. The usual sewing work was carried on in the morning which was followed by a pot luck dinner served at noon. At the afternoon business meeting Mrs. Lester Kay presided in the absence of the President, Mrs. George Cox. An outstanding feature of the meeting was the pledging by the organization of the sum of $1300 toward the work of remodeling the church, which will begin shortly after Easter.

In accord with the new setup as prescribed in the recent amalgamation of all the various Methodist bodies thruout the country into one organization under the name of the Methodist church, a new auxiliary body, to be known as the Women's Society for Christian Service of the church was organized. The purpose of the organization is to centralize and co-ordinate the work of the various organizations in the local church and to co-operate with similar organizations in the various other Methodist churches thruout the country. The following were selected as officers of the new organization:

President, Mrs. Earl Reish; vice-president, Mrs. Leonard Kay; rec. sec. Mrs. Lester Kay; cor. sec., Mrs. John Loebe; treasurer, Mrs. James Creer.

Vice President, Missionary Service, Mrs. H. Craig; vice-president, Local Church Activities, Mrs. Geo. Cox; sec. student work, Miss Myrtle Townsend; sec. Young Women, Mrs. B. J. Rooth; sec. Junior Work, Mrs. Chas. Cooper; sec. Literature, Mrs. Stanley Cooper; sec. Supplies, Mrs. Sherman S. Knox; chairman Spiritual Life, Miss Iva Hansen; counselor, Mrs. H. L. Brett.

The New High School Magazine Subscription Service

The big magazine subscription campaign sponsored by the Orland Park High School in which the students are all cooperating, is the new school service started last Friday. It is planned to make this an annual event in which the school provides a magazine renewal and subscription service covering all of the higher class magazines. The teachers are anxious that all parents understand that this is a service and not a begging campaign. The school is more concerned with keeping magazine profits in Orland where they will be used for the good of the school, than it is on urging the purchase of unwanted magazines. The students have been instructed to post receipts of all magazine orders taken, in front doors or windows so that Orland residents will not be annoyed by more than one student calling on any individual. Students are also instructed not to urge the purchase of any magazine upon anyone. However they are advised to invite everyone to seriously consider the Reader's Digest, which is considered by the teachers as being probably the one most valuable of all magazines for general reading. It is hoped that the public will have no occasion to see this campaign in any light than an honest attempt to provide an educational service to the community and to keep Orland's money at home.

The first day's results have brought reports of many appreciative parents with promise of many subscriptions and renewals. Jack Schlosser turned in five orders and Howard Braasch turned in one the first day.

ORLAND PARK WOMAN'S CLUB

The Orland Park Woman's club will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday, April 10. Mrs. Chas. E. Maddox, retiring president is opening her home for this meeting.

A pot luck luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock, and hostesses are, Mrs. Clista Margolis, Mrs. H. J. Erton, Mrs. Albert Felton and Mrs. Henry Walston.

Following the luncheon the business meeting will be in session with election of officers, and each department chairman is urgently requested to bring a written report on her work during the past year.

Inasmuch as the Orland Park school has in process of construction of a new gymnasium, the guest speaker for the afternoon will be Mr. John L. Betes, a faculty member of the school. Mr. Betes is a graduate of Northwestern University and has been associated for several years with recreational and leisure time activities. He will discuss "A Community Recreational Program."

MOKENA

Mrs. Emma Buechholder of Wabash, Ind., returned to her home Friday, after visiting a week with her cousin Mrs. A. Pfleger.

Wm. B. Schweser, a former Mokena resident, now of Joliet, was stricken with a paralytic stroke last week. The left side was affected.

Mr. and Mrs. August Hauck entertained their 500 card club in their home Saturday evening.

The dance held by the Mokena baseball team in St. Mary's Hall on Saturday night was fairly well attended.

Regular monthly meeting of the Mokena Band Association will be held next Tuesday evening, April 8, at 8 o'clock in the High School room of the public school.

A number of important topics are to be discussed. All members please attend.

The Mokena Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. Otto Bartels on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Mall read a paper on the care of Phlox; Mrs. Balaz discussed the culture of Delphinium and Mrs. Walsh read some interesting notes on the control of garden pests. A picnic table was set on the table of the month.

Bert Spiess was surprised in his home Sunday in honor of his birthday. His brothers and their wives were the guests. A good time was enjoyed.

Mrs. Florence Steele left Monday for Florida to join her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Van Kirk of Chicago who spent the winter there. Mrs. Steele will enjoy with them a motor trip thru the south before returning home.

The Methodist Sunday School Board met with Mrs. Hugo Neithammer Wednesday evening. Plans were made for the sacred concert which the choir of the Richard Street Methodist church will render for the church in Mokena Sunday evening, April 20 to which all are urged to see and enjoy. Watch for more details later.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

An hour's marching led by Mr. Dath and Mr. Howes was part of the Mokena Boy Scout meeting held on Monday evening following the regular ceremony of opening. Leigh Krapp was excluded so that he could pass some Tenderfoot tests.

BOY SCOUTS F AMERICA
Leonard Bruder who has been spending a vacation in Florida was joined last Saturday by his sister Katherine. Together they will spend a week or so in the sunny state.

MEMBERS OF MOKENA ST. Johns Women's Union—If you are going to donate eggs for the Bensonville Home, please bring them to St. John's church basement or to the home of Mrs. Wm. Lowe. A truck will call for the eggs Thursday afternoon April 10th.

Pettingill Says:

When the first Liberty Loan Act was passed in World War No. 1 the House Ways and Means Committee put on its best bed-time manner and said: "It will be observed that the credit proposed to be extended to foreign governments will take care of itself and will not constitute an indebtedness that will have to be met by taxation in the future."

We swallowed the pill. It was unfashionable to use common sense then, as now. Our "experts" looked wise, and who were we, the people, to question them?

The experts were just about thirteen billion dollars wrong. This sum is owing us from our allies of 25 years ago. It will have "to be met by taxation in the future", or be repudiated at home as it has been abroad.

We have just voted another seven billions of credit to our allies in World War No. II. Will it be repaid? Why, of course. Absolutely. Who says so? Mr. Roosevelt. He said, "For what we send abroad we shall be repaid, within a reasonable time, following the close of hostilities." See his message to Congress, January 6, 1941.

"The King is a great magician, for his dominion extends to the minds of his subjects; he makes them think what he wishes." So it was said of old time.

I am not now questioning the wisdom of the seven billions. I do question the wisdom of fooling the American people. To fool them is to break down faith in our democracy. It is worse to lose faith than to lose money. And you can't fool all the people all the time. Time and the people catch up with mayors, governors, presidents and dictators. No one has ever escaped their final audit.

Today, under the cry of unity and patriotism the locks are being shut on the human mind. No criticism. See nothing, hear nothing, know nothing.

It is wrong. There should be criticism, and it should be welcomed, not rebuffed. Britain and Italy have found that out. If there had been criticism of their war preparations two and five years ago they would be better off today. We, too.

Everything, good or bad, now hides behind "national defense". In Michigan, for example, school commissioners are asking for a salary boost on the ground of "national defense". How can our democracy protect itself from slogans and political snake oil? You could not sell wooden nutmegs to the men who founded this Republic. Can we save it NOW—with arms alone? Or only by breeding more men and fewer mice?

But I was speaking of debt. An irritating subject. Scarcely mentioned in polite circles. But whether we talk of debt, debt will talk to us.

The other day the United States filed suit to garnish the cash value of a man's life insurance policy—the last thing he had on earth. Government debt spoke to that man with a loud voice. He owed the government and could not pay. So the government proceeded to strip him of his last penny.

No one gets anywhere talking about billions. But we do understand city debts and bond issues. So let us prorate the federal debt, down to a typical city of 100,000 population like South Bend, Indiana; Utica, New York; Duluth, Minnesota; Sacramento, Calif.; Peoria, Illinois; Somerville, Mass.; Charlotte, N. C.; or El Paso, Texas. These 8 cities, all of them, owe together $45,516,000 of municipal debt.

In 1942 it is estimated that the Federal debt will reach $65 billions. That will amount, per capita, to $494.65. Per family of four to $1978.60. Per town of $10,000 to $4,946,500. Per city of 100,000, to $49,465,000. If you want to apply it to your town or city, multiply your population by $494.65.

In short, the share of each of these eight cities of 100,000 population, in the federal debt, will be more than the total municipal debt of the entire eight. South Bend city debt is $1,730,000. Its share of the Federal debt will be $49,650,000. Would its taxpayers vote themselves such a debt? No, you have to do it with mirrors. The next question is, could South Bend pay a debt of $49,650,000?

At the present interest rate South Bend will pay, annually, as its share of Federal taxes to meet Federal interest, $1,172,000. When the Federal debt reaches $100 billions, South Bend's share of the interest charge, annually, will be more than its total city debt. It will have to pay the equivalent of its entire present debt, each year, year after year. This is what is hidden at the foot of the rainbow. It will appear in the final audit.

Coming to the Roxy

"VIRGINIA" —

An awe-inspiring modern love story of the old Southland pitched to the tempo of today, involving the theme of a beautiful rebel, coming to the Roxy Theatre, at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, starring Madeline Carroll and Fred MacMurray.

This Friday and Saturday the Roxy Theatre will feature that famed radio skit, the Aldrich Family on the silver screen in "LIFE WITH HENRY," starring Jackie Cooper, who turns the family upside down with his sudden lust for travel in some far-away place, which is abounding with innumerable laughs and mirth-provoking insane circumstances on the part of a typical American boy.

Rural Crime Reporter New Daily Feature On Station WCLS

Starting Monday, April 7, the Rural Crime Reporter will be a daily feature of radio station WCLS. Ted Blair will do the reporting every day, Monday through Friday, at 7:15 p.m.

A survey among county officials, Farm and Home Advisors, farm organizations and weekly editors, indicates the need for such a program.

Information will be gathered from sheriffs, police and other law enforcing agencies.

The reports will include details of current swindles, rackets and robberies. Old swindles which yearly find new perpetrators and new victims, will be related in detail. In this way, every listener will be kept fully informed and an informed listener will not fall for a swindle with which they are familiar.

Daily and weekly papers will also come in for their share of publicity and credit. Any paper which prints the report of a swindle, or robbery, will be credited with the source of the material. A marked copy, addressed to the Rural Crime Reporter will receive attention and credit for the item.

Any loss by robbery or swindle is a double loss to the community. The owner has less money to spend at home... it goes without saying that the robber or swindler leaves the community of his victim and spends his ill-gotten gains elsewhere.

Can we count on your cooperation in this crusade against rural crimes?

PALOS PARK

The Palos Oak Hill Cemetery Association will hold an all day meeting in the home of Mrs. Maude Erickson of Western Springs, Tuesday April 8. The day will be spent quilting.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pettijohn Munch died in her home on 131st street Tuesday afternoon March 25. She has been sick for some time but was getting along fairly well when she suffered an acute heart attack.

Mrs. Munch was born September 17, 1862 and was a life-long resident of Palos. Her husband, Henry and two children—Lily and Henry preceded her in death. Her father, John Pettijohn was killed in the Civil war. She was a charter member of the Oak Hill Cemetery Association, and held the office of secretary since its incorporation.

Surviving are two daughters, Elizabeth and Charlotte; three sisters, Minnie Kenney, Thirza Colwell and Rachel Gunning and one brother Lester Howell all of Washington. Funeral services were held in the Hallihan Funeral Home in Blue Island with burial in Oak Hill.

Don't forget to keep open the date of May 3. That is the night of the big dance in the village hall given by the Palos Juniors.

Dr. Emily B. Kean, an old resident of Palos Park celebrated her 82nd birthday April 3 in her home. Our heartfelt congratulations to her and we wish her many more years of health and happiness.

Mesdames Pronger, Mullen and Yunker spent Wednesday in the home of Mrs. Stella Pederson in Maywood.

Mr. Davis preached his last sermon in the Palos Community church last Sunday. A new minister will soon take his place. Mrs. Clara Mahaffay entertained him for dinner Sunday.

Mr. Harry S. Crowley has become assistant staff worker of the American Red Cross. She is the very active chairman of the Work Group of Palos. This group is open to anyone—if you can knit, crochet or sew be sure and come and join the club.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Line Munch has been ill but is now able to be taken out again.

Miss Catherine McClaughry returned home from the Englewood hospital last week. We wish her a speedy recovery so we can see her out once again.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Powell and daughter Patricia of Chicago were week end guests in the Frank Powell home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Willard of Joliet were Friday evening guests in the Gordon Powell home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Robson, Sr., daughters June and Martha Louise, and sons John and Ray Jr., and his wife and infant son William Leo spent Sunday with Mrs. Jessie L. Mains.

The pupils of McCord and Weir schools went to the Achievement meeting held at the Morrison hotel in Chicago Monday. Those attending this all day affair were: Frank and Paul Sanders, Buddy Braasch and Shirley Treadway and the teacher, Mrs. Burnette of McCord school; Gordon and Beverly Powell, August and Florence Ziebell, Norma Strand and the teacher, Mrs. Frank Powell of Weir School. A grand time was reported by all!

Harold Robson and his cousin, Howard, were Saturday evening callers on Dorothy Robson.

The pupils of McCord School are organizing a rhythm band. The teacher, Mrs. Burnette and Dorothy Robson are the instructors.

Clem Lesicki is doing a lot of remodeling on the Clara Hecht home which he recently purchased.

Norma Strand is a new pupil at the Weir School, bringing the total up to eight.

HE WHO GETS KICKED

To Ascertain the Amount of Silage In Your Silos

In fairness to both the buyer and seller of silage it should be said that the weight of a cubic foot of silage is so variable that the much used rules for estimating silage may be very inaccurate.

An actual test has proven that silos are generally over-estimated in capacity and the weight for cubic foot used in most tables is high.

The most accurate way to buy or sell silage would be by actual weight. If scales are conveniently located they should by all means be used and each load weighed or at least occasional loads weighed and the number of loads noted. Where this is not possible, the following rule will give approximate results—Diameter squared x .7854 x depth of settled silage—will give the number of cubic feet of silage. With silage less than 30 feet in depth, 35 pounds per cubic foot can be used; from 30 to 35 feet in depth, 37 pounds per cubic foot and from 35 to 40 feet in depth, 40 pounds to the cubic foot. In silos with silage between 40 and 50 feet in depth, 45 pounds per cubic foot may be used. The number of cubic feet of silage times the weight per cubic foot, divided by 2,000 will give tons of silage.

INVITE THEM ALL—AND HAVE BAKED POTATOES
(See Recipes Below)

LET'S SERVE POTATOES

Guests are coming for dinner. You have your meat and vegetables, and you have planned your dessert. You have potatoes on hand. But have you decided how you're going to prepare them?

I'll wager you haven't. It's an oft-repeated story in kitchens from Washington to Florida, Maine to California. Because the POTATO is such an old standby, you perhaps wait 'til the last minute to decide its preparation. Then it's too late to try "something different."

Don't treat the potato as though it were the Cinderella of the vegetable kingdom. Remember, it responds well to careful treatment. While it is usually considered to have a bland flavor, proper cooking will bring out its subtleties.

Although there are only three basic ways of cooking potatoes—baking, boiling or frying them in their raw form—there are innumerable new and different things to do with this vegetable.

I wonder if you have ever tried frankfurter- or sausage-stuffed potatoes, potato croquettes, pancake potatoes, Idaho Suzettes or potato doughnuts?

If not, resolve to use these recipes. I guarantee they'll help you "get the most out of your potatoes!"

*Quick Dutch-Stuffed Baked Potatoes.

(See picture at top of column)
6 medium-sized Idaho potatoes
6 link sausages or frankfurters
Scrub the potatoes and with an apple corer make a hole lengthwise through each potato. Stuff with a frankfurter or sausage. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 45 minutes, or until potatoes are done.

For an even richer flavor, stuff with a mixture of finely chopped sweet spanish onions and ground meat. Put a slice of bacon or salt pork over the potatoes and bake as usual. Length of baking time depends on size of potatoes.

Nut Potato Croquettes.

2 cups hot mashed potatoes
1/4 cup cream or milk
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
1 cup crushed nuts
To the potatoes add the cream or milk, baking powder, seasoning and half the nuts. Spread mixture on plate to cool. Shape, roll in nuts and cook in deep, hot fat (350 degrees F.) until golden brown. Drain on soft paper.

Potato Doughnuts.

2 cups flour
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg or cinnamon
1 cup rice potatoes
1 tablespoon butter
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
Sift flour, salt, baking powder and spice together. Put the hot rice potatoes in a mixing bowl, add the butter and stir until the butter is melted. Cool until lukewarm. Add

LYNN SAYS:

Baking potatoes is perhaps the most healthful method of preparing them, because steam escapes from them and results in a mealy product. No valuable minerals are lost, and, if the skin is also eaten with the contents, all benefits of the potato are realized.

If you are not quite ready to serve your potatoes when they are ready to come out of the oven, cover them with a towel so that moisture will be absorbed, and at the same time warmth will be retained.

Sweet potatoes bake in less time than white potatoes.

It is important to retain vitamin C in potatoes, as well as in all vegetables. In order to do this, store them in a cool place; peel just before cooking; cook whole, if possible; have the water boiling rapidly before plunging them in; use a small amount of cooking water; cook only until tender.

the unbeaten eggs and sugar; mix well. Stir in the sifted dry ingredients; mix until smooth. Place mixture on a floured board; roll until 1/2 inch thick, cut into rounds with a floured doughnut cutter. Cook in deep, hot fat (370 degrees F.) until golden brown. Drain on soft paper. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Idaho Suzettes.

6 medium-sized Idaho potatoes
1/2 cup hot milk
2 tablespoons melted fat
6 tablespoons buttered crumbs
1 tablespoon grated cheese
6 eggs
Salt and pepper

Select medium-sized or large potatoes; scrub and bake at 450 degrees F. until each is soft when you pick it up and squeeze with a cloth. When done, remove a piece of skin from the side of each potato to make it boat-shaped, or cut large potatoes in two, lengthwise. Scoop out the inside, being careful not to break the shell. Mash the pulp thoroughly, or put it through a ricer. Add butter, salt and milk and beat well. Pile the mixture lightly back into the shells. Refill the shell to the top and make a depression in the center of each potato. Break an egg into each depression, season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with buttered crumbs that have been combined with grated cheese. Bake in a slow oven (250-350 degrees F.) long enough to set the egg and brown lightly—for 6 to 10 minutes.

Belgian Baked Potatoes.

Wash and peel potatoes and cut into eighths lengthwise. Dry between towels. Dip cut pieces in melted shortening and lay in a shallow pan, being sure that they do not overlap. Bake in a quick oven (400 degrees F.) until brown on top. Turn carefully and continue baking until they resemble french-fried potatoes. Baste them with more shortening during baking, if necessary. When done, sprinkle with salt and serve piping hot.

Franconia Potatoes.

Use uniform medium potatoes. Pare and parboil 10 minutes. Drain, place around roast, and bake 40 minutes, or until soft, turning often and basting with fat in pan so that they will brown.

Old-Fashioned Scalloped Potatoes.

4 large potatoes, pared
1 small onion, thinly sliced
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 1/2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon butter
1 1/4 cups milk

Cut potatoes in 1/8-inch slices. Place potatoes and onions in buttered baking dish sprinkling each layer with salt, pepper and flour, and dotting with butter. Add milk and cover. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 2 hours, or until potatoes are tender, uncovering them during the last 30 minutes of baking. Serves 4.

Lyonnais Potatoes.

4 teaspoons butter or bacon fat
2 onions, sliced
3 cups cooked potatoes
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Heat the fat in a frying pan and cook the onions in it a few minutes. Add the potatoes and cook slowly, stirring occasionally until all sides of the potatoes are golden brown. Season with salt and pepper. Press flat with knife and shake over low fire until brown on bottom. Turn like an omelet. Serve on a hot platter with finely chopped parsley sprinkled over the top.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Ma—

The bundle containing pajamers arrived okay and I am now one of the few men in camp who don't sleep in his underclothes. You wud think the army wud issue pajamers to soldiers on account they have been a part of men's night clothing for years but I gess General Grant didn't wear them so the army don't recognize 'em yet. I wish you wud pick plainer colors as the boys are all kidding me and asking who I think I am Looshush Beebe.

It is okay to send me some bath towels and some good soap as the army issues none that I can locate and gee mom wud it be a treat if the army had bathrooms right off the main room like at home! Going to the bathroom here is like being a member by Admiral Bird's expedition. Some of the boys that started for the bathroom early in the winter are out in the ice floes yet and I gess polar bears got one or two of 'em.

I wish you wud send me a flashlight as the army is way behind on street lighting and this camp in the middle of the night is no Broadway. You asked me about sending a radio. Well, only one radio is allowed to a tent of five men and we have one but the hardest fighting so far is between me and the four others over what programs we should tune in on.

Believe me ma them four other fellows have lousy taste in what is good radio entertainment.

The drilling is still being pushed witch seams pretty silly as I knew how to walk long before I came up here and anything I did not know I learned before I was here a week.

I am still getting lots of gun practice and while I am no Buffalo Bill I gess I could hit an enemy if he was well bunched and did not come at me zig-zag. We do not get much zig-zag practice. I get a lot of open field practice and have to keep dropping flat on my stummick and I know why Napoleon said a army traveled on its stummick as my stummick has corns on it now. I can't tell half the time whether I am fighting a enemy or looking for moths in a rug.

One of the boys is going to be transferred to the parachute corps because he has an uncle who knows a congressman and he is welkum to it. I don't know what I am doing in the army, but I know I certainly ain't in it because of no yen for parachutes.

The idea is to fly in a plain into the enemy's country and then jump out trusting that everything will work according to the set of direckshun that comes with the parachute but I have never have no wish to go up in a airplan let alone to jump out of one. Life in the infantry is tough but you always know you are a soldier and not a circus performer.

Have you heard any more news about what this is all about, I mean have we leased the war from England yet and what part of Europe am I going to be loaned to? The papers are as confusing as ever, one editor saying we will be kept short of war and the other saying we ain't more than a half inch short of it right now. Well, anyhow, ma, all I am doing is trusting that Roosevelt wasn't fooling in his eelckshun speeches when he said I wud get in no war and that anyway I wud not wind up in Europe or Asia loaned, leased or owned outright. But I will close now as it is time to drill again.

Your son,
Oscar.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

QUILTS do not belong to any one period and there doesn't seem to be the slightest indication that the old art of making them is dying out. Most quilts today are planned as bedspreads and have a color scheme to harmonize with other decorations. If a variety of figured scraps are used in the piecing, one dominant plain color is generally repeated in each block to give the design unity. Again, one color is combined with white throughout the entire quilt. Some quilts have elaborate pieced borders; others are finished with a band of white with the dominant color used as an edge binding. A bias striped material makes the binding of the quilt in the Whirl Wind pattern shown here.

The beauty of any quilt is enhanced if it is set off with a valance around the bed. They knew that in the days of the four-poster and the rule applies still. The bed in the sketch had no particular tradition and the footboard was much too high to display the quilt spread to advantage. What a difference in the effect when the board was cut down and the crisp frills of dotted Swiss were added! Surely, any quilt that is worth piecing is worth this extra touch.
